INDIAN SCHOOLS.

The Globe-Democrat, of a few days ago, had an article upon the several Indian schools which have been established at different points in the United States, but strangely enough omitted the Albuquerque school from its list altogether. The Indian school at Albuquerque is one of the most important institutions of this character in the country, and probably has more pupils at the present time than any of the other schools of its character. We are not informed as to the number of children at each of the several schools referred to by the Globe-Democrat, but the attendance at the Albuquerque school, during the session now commencing, will not fall below a hundred and twenty-five, and this, doubtless, is a greater number than attend any of the other schools. The government sometime ago appropriated $25,000 for the erection of a suitable building for the school, on condition that the people would provide, free of cost to the government, the land necessary for the school farm. This was done some months ago. A tract of sixty acres of as desirable land as any in the Rio Grande valley, was purchased by the people of Albuquerque and deeded to the United States. The building fund is now available, and it is supposed the work of putting up the house will be commenced sometime during the present season.

The children attending the school at this place are Pueblos and Navajos. The parents are very chary about permitting their children to come at first, but as soon as they see that it is "all right," and the little ones are to be well treated, they appear to be glad to have them come, and show unmistakable pride in the fact that their children are learning to read and write "like the white man."

At the end of the term the children all go home to the tribe, to spend vacation, and that the Indians appreciate the school is shown by the fact that at the beginning of the term the old pupils all return, and bring a considerable number of new ones along with them.

Give the schoolmaster a fair chance, and he will soon solve the Indian problem. The rattle is mightier than the sword.

LIVE STOCK EXCHANGE.

By a little effort the cattle trade at Albuquerque could be made a very important element in the business of the city. Situated as it is, in the center of one of the grandest grazing regions in the world, and being the railroad center of the Territory—the gateway through which the live stock from all the extensive districts south, west and north of us must seek an outlet to the east, it requires no prophet to foresee that Albuquerque must become, at no distant day, one of the most important cattle markets on the continent. Already the trade is beginning to assume considerable proportions, and hardly a day passes but men may be met, from the east, who have come here for the purpose of buying cattle or sheep. But for want of proper organization the business is conducted under considerable difficulty. The purchaser is obliged to ride around the country inquiring at every ranch, in order to learn where animals are for sale, and must either carry his money with him, or come back to town whenever he makes a trade. What we need, and ought to have without delay, is a live stock exchange. The man with stock to sell would then have a central point at which to make the fact known, the buyer would be generally assisted in finding what he was looking for, and the business would be greatly facilitated. It would bring the buyer and seller together, and would soon give the public a better idea of the vast quantities of live stock produced in this country, for market.

The establishment of an exchange would very soon be followed by the building of stock yards, and this would at once make Albuquerque the center of the cattle trade of all this part of the country, and would have a beneficial effect upon every department of business.

Anyone can see at a glance, in passing through New Mexico that this Territory is destined to become one of the greatest cattle producing countries in the world, and we must see to it that the center of this immense trade is fixed at Albuquerque.

HERBERT SPENCER.

Herbert Spencer, the distinguished English philosopher, now on a visit to this country, has been spending the past week in Washington. He declines all receptions and makes no visits, but wanders about on foot, accompanied by a friend, peering into the shop windows and dropping into the public buildings as the fancy suits. A correspondent describes his personal appearance, as follows:

The spectator sees a man of medium height, rather sparely built, with a long face, slight mustache, whiskers, complexion full and ruddy, and an immense pair of spectacles concealing his eyes; a soft felt hat of gray color and remarkable shape and size is pulled down on the back of his head, making a sort of nimbus, and the masses of gray hair escaping from under it rather strengthen the impression received at a distance that his clothes do not fit him, is confirmed, but a steady firm tread and a pair of broad-soled English walking shoes show that the distinguished foreigner is accustomed to walking.

Bran Beds for the Babies.

From the London Globe.
A French doctor has invented a new bed for babies which holds them safe in its custody and prevents them from giving any trouble at night to their attendants. This gentleman has subjected his system to the most trying of all tests, for he has applied it to all his own children, and considers that the life of one of them is entirely owing to its use. The idea is to fill the greatest part of the cradle with bran and immerse the legs and part of the body of the child in this nest, covering them over in the usual way, but fastening down the counterpane tight, so as to keep him firm in his place. Why this change of tactics should have the effect of taking away from the infant his usual desire to howl during a part of every night is a question which we will leave to the doctor to explain for himself after they have tried the system. In the meantime, until that trial has been made it is only civil to believe the testimony of Drs. Bourgeois and Vigoroux, who in two French papers of some authority declare that such is the invariable result. This is not, however, the only advantage to be derived from the system. The bran is supposed to have a warming and stimulating influence superior to any sort of cotton or cloth, and to allow children of the more sickly kind to develop more quickly, and to be sooner able to use their limbs. The inventor of the system declares that they delight in their bran beds, and always "quilt them with sugar" when moved at the age of two, to one of a different kind.

Two Great Railroads.

Tomlinson Independent.
Between the two railroad corporations now operating in this territory there is a marked difference. The Southern Pacific Company has on every occasion shown their grasping rapacity, and never misses an opportunity to extort from their customers when the occasion offers. They have never yet shown the least disposition to meet the people half way or treat them justly or fairly. Whenever they have a chance to practice their ruinous discriminations, they never failed to do so. In fact, their policy in Arizona has had a tendency to repel instead of inviting business, to repress instead of encouraging the development of our resources.

In marked contrast to this dog-in-the-manger policy, the California company is that of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe. They have treated our people with fairness and impartiality. They have not taken advantage of their position to make ruinous charges. They have encouraged the development of our dormant industries and the building up of our local trade. Their employees are courteous and obliging, and that arrogant, overbearing manner of the Southern Pacific is conspicuous by its absence among the officers and men of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe. These facts should not be forgotten by our people, and a corporation which has shown a disposition to treat us honestly and fairly, is deserving the same treatment in return.

Lincoln's Title of Rail-Splitter.

From the Century.
Mr. Seaward was nominated in the convention by Mr. Evans, of New York. Mr. Lincoln was nominated by Mr. Judd, of Illinois. The nomination of Mr. Lincoln was seconded by Mr. Delano, of Ohio, who said: "I desire to second the nomination of a man who can split rails and maul Democrats—Abraham Lincoln." This probably originated the term "rail-splitter," and which immediately became popular. Decorated and illuminated rails, surrounded the newspaper offices, and became a leading feature of the campaign. "Rail-splitting Battalions" were formed in the different cities and minor villages of the north. At the great ratification meeting at Cooper Institute June 8, after speeches by Messrs. Evans, Blatchford, W. C. Cullen, and Judge Tracy, of California, the last named said: "We wage no war upon the south, we harbor no malice against the south. We merely mean to fence them in, (pointing significantly to a rail exhibited on the platform) this is all we propose to do to stop the extension of slavery, and Abe Lincoln has split the rails to build the fence."

Locked in the Winter.

General Hazen, the Chief of the Signal Bureau, has received advice that the supply expedition which sailed in the steamer Neptune from St. John's Newfoundland, July 8 of this year, with additional stores for Lieutenant Greely's party, returned on Saturday to St. John's having been unable to reach Lieutenant Greely. The vessel reports a solid ice barrier extending from Cape Ingheld to Ross Bay. Lieutenant Greely's station is in latitude 81° 40', while the vessel was only able to reach latitude 70° 20'. The party remained until September 5, at which date ice was formed to the depth of four inches, and to remain any longer would be to remain for the winter. The Neptune was enabled to establish depots to secure Lieutenant Greely's safe retreat, should it become necessary a year or two hence. No anxiety for the safety of Lieutenant Greely's party is entertained. They are simply supplied with stores of all kinds for at least two years. The impossibility of annually reaching the station was foreseen and provided for.

A Few Curious Facts.

A curious and suggestive fact shown by the census report—which report deserves a good deal more study than it gets—is that we now have 20 cities in the United States of over 100,000 population each, whereas in 1790 there was but one city that had over 50,000 people, and in 1810 there was only two. St. Louis is now larger than New York was in 1840; Kansas City is larger than either New York or Philadelphia was in 1800; and Topeka has more than half as many inhabitants as New York had when the first census was taken in 1790. The fact is also worth mentioning that there are ten cities in the United States of more than 200,000 citizens each, while in England there are but seven and in France only four.—Topeka Capital.

New York Mansions.

Not much space remains upon Fifth avenue for those who may desire to build costly mansions, and it is something of a question where future splendid residences will be erected. The mistake made by millionaires who have erected grand mansions has been to set them in a crowded street upon the sidewalk's edge, thus depriving them of the first suggestion of the owner's great wealth, viz, spacious grounds. A flamboyant front is about the only exterior distinction that can be given to a rich man's city house, where space is limited, and the taste of adopting such a peculiarity does not go unquestioned. Upon the Boulevard, Riverside Drive, Eighth avenue and the heights west of Morningside park remain sites where fine houses may be erected amid shade trees and winding drives, but that is about the only region left below Harlem river. A continuance of current prosperity must bring with it a new generation of rich men, and they naturally would give New York suburban scenes of luxurious architecture and tasteful landscape if they could find suitable building spots.

Women at the Bar.

From the Philadelphia Press.
The supreme court of Connecticut has decided that women are eligible to membership in the bar of that State, and Miss Mall, by virtue of this decision and the certificate of the bar committee that she has passed the necessary examination, will be admitted to practice law in Missouri, California and the District of Columbia, and may practice before the supreme court of the United States after three years practice in the highest courts of any State, Territory, or of the District of Columbia. Other States, will, no doubt, be moved to allow women to become lawyers as soon as they seriously press their application. If the courts refuse, as they have in some instances, the legislature will be more tractable. Nevertheless we do not look for any great influx of women to the legal profession. The habits of thought, tastes and talents of all but an exceedingly limited number are inconsistent with much success in the legal profession. There is, however, an occasional woman fit for that particular calling, and the doors should not be closed against her.

Richest Country in the World.

Those people who think that the United States is the biggest, richest, strongest, and in every respect unrivaled or unchallengeable country on the face of the globe, will read the following with evident satisfaction: "Reading the figures of Mulhall, the English statistician, is enough to make an ordinary Yankee just too proud for anything. He estimates the value of property in the United States at $50,000,000,000, and classes it as the richest country in the known world. He places England next in the list, at $44,100,000,000, and France third, with $37,200,000,000. Considering that it is only about two hundred and sixty-five years since a really live settlement was made in the American woods, and that France and England have a civilization which dates back anywhere from fifteen hundred to two thousand years, this showing by an English statistician is enough to make the effete despots hide their heads in shame."

The Jeannette Investigation.

It is the prevalent impression that the investigation concerning the loss of the Jeannette will begin about the latter part of this week. The testimony will hardly be made public until the investigation has closed. Engineer Melville is credited with the remark that as the Jeannette was a private vessel, the crew volunteers, and all the expenses paid by Mr. Bennett, he cannot see why the investigation should take place at all. There appears to be reason enough, however. The evidence so far as received leads very naturally to the conclusion that the loss of the vessel and the death of De Long and his companions may have been the direct result of criminal negligence and recklessness on the part of somebody, though upon whom the blame is to be laid remains to be seen. What the public wants is more light upon the subject, and this it is surely entitled to.

Ponies That Please the Children.

As many of our readers do not know that there is a Shelland pony ranch in the state we will give them a bit of information. Baron Von Raub, Leon Springs, Bexar county, has 8,000 acres of land under fence, properly subdivided and stocked with beautiful Shelland and spotted ponies. His breeding stock consists of seven stallions and forty-five mares, all thoroughbred, and 200 spotted pony mares. He is breeding a race of striped and spotted ponies to please the children. He sells the increase to persons all over the world, and the supply is not equal to the demand. These little ponies range over the prairies like sheep or goats, and present a novel appearance—very gentle, and every one as docile as a cat, and can be caught anywhere on the range.—Texas Wool Grower.

As Happy as Clams.

A couple arrived in the city from Fort Worth on yesterday morning's east-bound train over the Texas & Pacific road, and were married, when they took a bridal tour over the city, footing it all the way. The bride was attired in a blue dress, with red roses worked in the borders. She wore a straw hat, which was set off with a red plume. The bridegroom wore his pants in his boots, which were ornamented with a pair of huge spurs, was coatless, wore a blue flannel shirt and a slouch, broad-brimmed hat. They munched ginger-cake and appeared to be cheerful of bliss. Where is the man who said he would rather be a lamp-post in the city of New York than be governor of the state of Texas?—Dallas (Tex.) Herald.

Sour Bread.

From the Graphic.
The venerable Dr. Woolsey, of Yale, who is much interested in securing a general law of divorce throughout the United States, is asked by an interviewer if he does not think that sour bread has much to do with divorce. Whereat the doctor wonderingly asks, "Sour bread? What is that?" Let us answer.
Sour bread, doctor, is death. Sour bread is sin. Sour bread is original sin. Sour bread is dyspepsia. Sour bread poisons first the body and then the mind. Sour bread is infidelity taken into the stomach and from there diffused into the brain. Sour bread is not the bread for inspiration or wisdom. Sour bread eaten to give nutriment and strength, and giving none, causes desire for the artificial stimulants, tobacco and whisky. Pure food, doctor, helps largely to make pure men and women. Wives who poison their husbands daily, doctor, with dishes fried in rancid lard or butter, or who mix animal grease in a state of semi-decomposition with their hot biscuit, or who top this involuntary system of Lucretia Borgiasm with sour bread, are the chief promoters of domestic rows, troubles, wrangles and finally divorce. Sour bread clouds the mind, darkens the understanding, lowers the intellect and weakens the body. Good bread and pure food worked up finally into brain or matter or whatever you choose to call it, gives clear heads, clear ideas, truth, and promotes and leads to gentleness, mercy, charity and peace. The kitchen, doctor, is the neglected corner-stone of your theology. The cook is now one of the despised saviors of humanity. Despair not the day of small things is coming. Spirituality and divinity can't be developed out of a diet of chips, and husbands don't get much better. Husbands, of course, doctor, are bad. All husbands are worse, much worse than their wives. But, as a commencement to make them better, they must have wives who will see that they have good bread. Yes, doctor. Put that in your pipe and smoke it. But perhaps you don't smoke.

Worse Than Buttercup's Mixing.

There are some children in San Francisco who claim the unique distinction of having in their veins the blood of the five races into which mankind is divided. Their great-grandfather was part negro and part American Indian; their great-grandmother was a native Sandwich islander; hence their grandmother was negro, Indian, Malay. She married their grandfather, who was a Chinaman, which added a Mongolian strain to their mother's blood, while their father, a white man, contributed the Caucasian element to their compound organizations. Hence, they might be called "colored" children, uniting, as they do, white, black, red, yellow and brown.

The Atlantic and Pacific.

A special to the Globe-Democrat from Wichita, Kansas, says: The Atlantic and Pacific Railway, which is an extension of the St. Louis and San Francisco from Vinita, I. T., westward, is completed and ready for running trains to the banks of the Arkansas river. This road now penetrates the land occupied by the Creek Nation. Westward from the Arkansas the road will run through the Oklahoma land, on which Payne and his colonists are attempting a settlement. Contracts will be let at once for the building of 100 miles of the road west from the Arkansas river. If this is done the Atlantic and Pacific road, will, in a great measure, control the cattle trade next year.

A String of Hypotheses.

If it be true, as has been alleged, that the President pressed Secretary Folger forward as a candidate for governor of New York because he desired to make room in his cabinet for some one of his more stalwart friends; and if it be true that the present secretary has no intention of resigning his cabinet portfolio until he is governor-elect; and if it happen after all that the next governor of New York is a Democrat, what a very disagreeable state of affairs it would be for the administration, to be sure!—Providence Press.

A Great American Industry.

The great American peanut lifts its voice to the tariff commission appealing for better protection against the deadly blight of foreign competition. The peanut is an institution which the fathers planted deep in the soil of the western empire, and if it is to be supported by any effete monarchy of the old world this republic had better strike a balance and go into liquidation with as little delay as possible.—Philadelphia Press.

Safe Ground for Republican Voters.

We propose to support the ticket headed by Charles J. Folger, but we do not propose to support it for the reason that the "machine" made it, nor because there was no mistakes in the making. We propose to support the ticket because it is better than the men who made it. We propose to support the ticket because, with all the mistakes in the making, it is the Republican ticket.—Elmira (New York) Advertiser.

Out of Season.

Wednesday evening a cyclone passed through Newton, Kas. It demolished the Evangelical church during service, but none of the audience were seriously injured. No other damage was done. The church was a new frame standing at the south end of Main street. It had been poorly constructed but presented a good appearance.

Regulating the Railroads.

If the courts continue to make such decisions as they have in nearly every case where the question of regulating rates on railroads are concerned, there will hardly be need of legislation for that purpose. Thus far the courts hold that they can right all wrong.—Topeka Commonwealth.

A Stroke of Democratic Wisdom.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.
It was a shrewd movement on the part of the New York Democrats to nominate a candidate for governor from a place far from the madding crowds of the great city of New York. It is so far away that each of the fierce factions may claim him.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Valuable Medicine.
Dr. W. H. Parmelee, Toledo, Ohio, says: "I have prescribed the 'acid' in a large variety of diseases, and have been amply satisfied that it is a valuable addition to our list of medicinal agents."
